

Precepting 101

A Refresher Course for All Faculty

February 27, 2017

AAMC Belcher Pavilion, 7th Floor, Doordan Institute

Dinner 4:30 pm

Presentation 5-7 pm

Program Description:

As a new ACGME-accredited sponsoring institution, AAMC will start its first Surgery Residency Program in July, 2017. AAMC has also expanded its outreach to students for elective experience over the past year. These growth opportunities in our learning environment have highlighted the need to provide focused education to our clinicians in mentoring and supervising learners in both the in-patient and ambulatory settings.

The Precepting 101 course is a 2-hour informational session designed to orient clinicians who have not previously mentored students or residents in a learning environment or those that need a refresher. Information will be provided on precepting learners, details on their scope of practice, the use of assessments, as well as important tips on optimizing the workflow for you and the learner.

Target Audience:

Anne Arundel Medical Center medical staff that are teaching or anticipate teaching students, residents and/or fellows.

Course Director:

Silka Patel, MD, MPH

Assistant Professor, Department of Gyn/Ob, Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center

Women's Health Clerkship Director, Johns Hopkins School of Medicine

Program Objectives:

- To provide concrete tools to help AAMC clinicians work with learners
- To better facilitate our learners in both the in-patient and ambulatory settings in order to maximize the benefit for both the learner and the preceptor/faculty
- To improve understanding of the scope of practice for learners
